She leaves to mourn her passing her daughters, Saundra Williams and Beatrice Briggs; sons, Keith Cordell and Earl Cordell; sister, Beatrice Poindexter; and a host of grandchildren, great grandchildren, nephews, nieces, and cousins.

Sister Beatrice Briggs (daughter)

I remember as a young adult my mom and siblings being introduced to the truth while living in Brooklyn, New York. Ever since she encouraged us to rely on Jehovah in every aspect of life. She was baptized in the 60s at Brooklyn Bethel.

Once retired she lived in New Jersey and was able to Auxillary Pioneer. I remember she loved going to assemblies and working the food stands. Even though My mom was shy and quiet she wasn't scared to bear a witness for Jehovah and influenced a lot of our neighbors in the Howard Projects to go to the Kingdom Hall and some are still witnesses of Jehovah till this day.

Gary Cordell (son)

My mom sister Cordell was always smiling she was a very shy, strong and a silent person. The very first day we heard the name Jehovah you can see the joy in her face. She couldn't stop talking about the Bible truths especially when she auxiliary pioneer. She always put Jehovah first in her life and gave up good paying jobs to save her bible trained conscious She was a fine example for me and the family growing up. I love my mom from the first time I opened my eyes and she closed hers and will continue to love her forever .. love her baby boy, Gary

Josephine (family friend)

I am so glad I made the effort to visit them last year. For being so tiny she is quite feisty. The first meeting I attended at the Kingdom Hall I parked on Armstrong near Martin Luther King. When I told her, she said she would escort me, and I thought, how could this little person protect me. I asked her, and she said, Jehovah would protect her, she had everlasting life. Of course, I did not understand it then. She is certainly one in the cloud of witnesses we have in our lives.
