Obituary

James Sinclair Rogers, Jr affectionately known as “Red”, “Chief”, or “Jr” was born on September 20th, 1945 to James Sinclair Rogers Sr. and Ledia Bell Rogers of the Lumbee Tribe of Lumberton, North Carolina.

James attended primary school at Magnolia High School in Lumberton, N.C..

Seeking more opportunities, James moved to Jacksonville, Florida and lived with his cousin Dennis while trying to find his way in life. He found gainful employment in the steel and welding industries. Shortly after his arrival in Jacksonville, he met Queen and they cultivated a beautiful friendship, got married, and started to grow their wonderful family. He was employed by Hull Metal for many of his early years. He then studied and mastered his trade earning a certification in welding. James was then employed at Flamco Steel and worked as a supervisor until he retired in 2008.

James was an all around sportsman who honored victory as well as, integrity. He was an avid NASCAR fan and even drove and owned many race cars. He loved R.V. trips, gardening, and the good outdoors.

James had a profound love for family and always welcomed his friends and neighbors.

James was a member of Northeast Florida R.V. Club, and gave generously to many Native American Schools, Religious and community organizations.

James departed this life on Wednesday, June 15th, 2022 and was preceded in eternal slumber by his brothers: Leon Chavis, Wallace Nichols, and Micheal Nichols; sister, Pat Nichols; son, Alvin Bell Rogers; and daughters, Wendolyn Ousley (Vincent) and Anita Jefferson.

The cherished memories of James lives on through his loving wife, Queen Ester Rogers; sons, Timothy Rogers, Auja Rogers, and Ausha Rogers; grandchildren, Ellexia Taylor-Norris (Clinton), Bradley Taylor, Ajai Howard, Auja Rogers Jr., Ausha Rogers Jr., Keahland Haines, Jaeani Jackson, Andrew Wright, Aujaree Rogers, Aunisti Rogers, Ylisha Rogers, Nadiyah Rogers, Marley Rogers, Natalia Rogers, and Storm Rogers; great grandchildren: King Taylor-Sanders, Kingly Taylor-Norris, Ajai Haines, Alahni Jackson, and Jahsani Jackson; sisters: Janice Oxendine, Cecilia Nichols, and Anita Gonzales; brother, Dale Nichols; beloved cousin, Dennis Rogers; mother-in-law, Ruby Kirby; and a tribe of many nieces, nephews, cousins, relatives, friends, and loved ones.
